OAK MOTHS DRIVE CARMELITES BUGGY

■ Mini wasps to the rescue

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

A HIT squad will be coming to Carmel some time this year to take out those oak moths that so distress residents and visitors alike — especially when they're in that dangling-from-the-trees caterpillar instar (stage of development).

The assassins — hundreds of thousands of miniature wasps no larger than the head of a pin — will be imported here from Buena Biosystems of Ventura by the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, according to city forester Michael Branson.

The wasps, trichogramma peritomeum, arrive as 125,000 parasitized eggs affixed to small cards. "We're going to try some in the downtown commercial district," Branson told The Pine Cone. The cards cost about $18 each, and the city is ordering 20 cards, or 2,500,000 wasps.

"There are other wasps that live here already, and bacteria

Disabled woman seeks new trial against Eastwood

■ ADA REFORM PICKS UP KEY SENATE ENDORSEMENT

By PAUL MILLER

THE ATTORNEY representing a wheelchair-bound woman — whose story of being mistreated at Mission Ranch was utterly disbelieved by a federal jury last fall — has filed an impassioned plea for a new trial, claiming that "public policy and Congressional intent require" that his client win her ADA lawsuit against former Carmel Mayor Clint Eastwood.

The demand for a new trial was filed April 30 with the same U.S. District Court Judge, James Ware, who presided in September when Eastwood was vindicated and his accuser, Diane zum Brunnen, got nothing despite her claims that her rights were violated during a January 1996 visit to Eastwood's historic inn.

After the exhausting and embarrassing trial — which included an admission that she had lied in a pretrial deposition — zum Brunnen told The Pine Cone, "I won't be doing this anymore."

Reached at her Alameda home this week, zum Brunnen

Pebble Beach Co. sweetens reclaimed water deal

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE PEBBLE Beach Company offered some of its treasure trove of water credits for affordable housing or other community uses at a meeting with water district officials this week.

Company officials and water district directors discussed a $22 million plan floated last fall by the P.B. Co. to increase use of reclaimed water on golf courses and other open spaces in the Monterey Peninsula.

Much of the huge price tag would be raised through the sale of 105 acre-feet of water for lots-of-record and

Is Carmel Valley airport a real threat to local school?

By KIRSTIE WILDE

AN AIRPORT in Carmel Valley will probably have to close because of fears for the safety of Tularcitos School children just outside the airport property. But a survey of Peninsula schools shows that more than a thousand other children experience airplanes flying overhead daily, and the response of their school administrators to prepare for survival of an aircraft crash on campus is far more comprehensive.

In fact, a comparison of three local schools in close proximity to airport runways shows that Tularcitos is doing the least to prepare for an airplane disaster.

Monterey Peninsula Airport handles 100,000 takeoffs and landings annually, an average of 274 per day. Nearly 600 Santa Catalina School students study and play on a campus just off the main take-off pattern at the airport and 200 York School students are directly in line with the landing pattern.

Meanwhile, the Carmel Valley Airport averages fewer than four flights per day, according to Tularcitos Principal Kim Williams, who nevertheless testified last May 30 that the airport should be shut down. "That the airport should be closed is incontrovertible considering the safety of staff and

Fewer than 50 flights a week from Carmel Valley Airport have raised safety concerns at Tularcitos Elementary School (red arrow, center photo) and may force the airport to close, even though none of the planes fly directly over the school. Nearly 2,000 flights per week at Monterey Peninsula Airport fly over York School (left) and Santa Catalina School (right), where officials routinely drill all students in 'fallen aircraft scenarios.' Despite the much greater impact in Monterey, only the Carmel Valley Airport is slated to close.

MAN WHO STOLE MORE THAN $1 MILLION GETS 45 DAYS HOME DETENTION

By MARY BROWNFIELD

FORMER CARMEL real estate agent John Brugger — who pleaded no contest to charges of forging a signature on Christine Swanson's will and stealing more than $1 million from her estate — was sentenced May 16 by Judge Richard Silver to 45 days of home detention, three years misdemeanor probation and various fines.

He must finish reimbursing the estate for the money he stole, and has already returned about $1 million, according to the Swanson estate's trustee, Don Leach. Brugger promised to pay back $135,000 more to the estate — less fees and penalties which will be paid to other parties — in the next 10 days, Leach said.

'It's likely that if this case went to trial, Mr. Brugger would have been acquitted, there may have been a civil suit and he could have kept all the assets.'

— Judge Richard Silver

The title to an $80,000 Mercedes Brugger purchased with money from the estate will be handed over to the trust, according to Leach.

Brugger also agreed to pay $22,500 to his ex-wife, Susan Ulrich, to settle an emotional distress lawsuit she filed against him in January. Brugger had forged Ulrich's signature as a witness on Swanson's altered will.

But the grand theft and forgery charges against Brugger were reduced to misdemeanors and he was permitted to keep property he purchased in Arizona with funds from the estate, according to an agreement with the district attorney's office that was approved by Judge Silver.

Although Brugger rented a home in Carmel while his case was being processed, he currently lives in Arizona, he told the court. Judge Silver said he could serve his house detention in either location.

When defense attorney Bob Rosenthal suggested Brugger be sentenced to community service work rather than serve any time in home detention, Buckalew responded that the court should recognize the magnitude of his crimes.

"The court needs to send a message to the community that this kind of large thievery can't go unpunished," he said, and asked for either jail time or home detention.

At the start of the case, a judge held Brugger to answer on 13 felony counts, including fraud, embezzlement, falsifying evidence, forgery and elder abuse, but Judge Silver said the evidence had ultimately been unable to support those charges.

"If this was theft and serious abuse, the district attorney would not agree to this disposition, which includes a reduction to misdemeanors, misdemeanor probation, disposition of the funds, and if County Jail time is imposed, home confinement," Judge Silver said. "I would not have approved the agreement if not for those matters, and it's likely that if this case went to trial, Mr. Brugger would have been acquitted, there may have been a civil suit and he could have kept all the assets."

Brugger must report monthly to the probation department about his work and finances. He cannot change his residence without permission and he can have no financial dealings with people over the age of 60, Silver ordered.

"That gives me one more year," the judge mused.

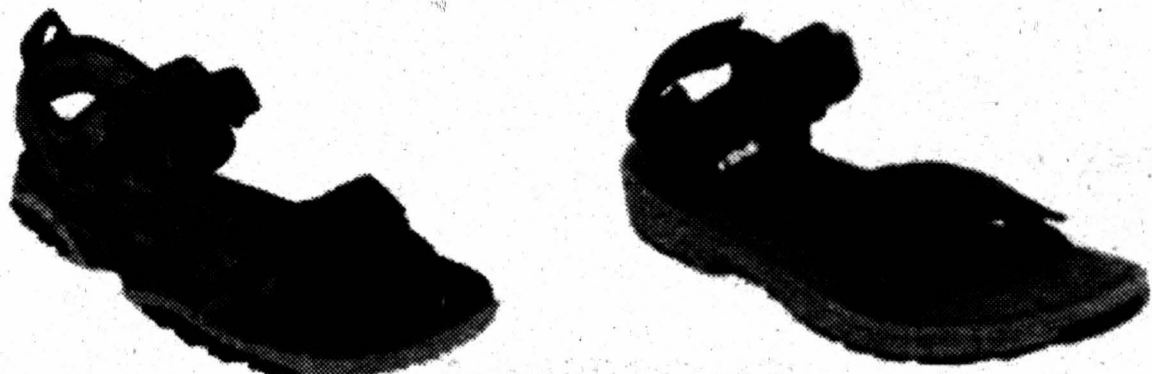

Meanwhile, Leach will be working with the probate court to determine to whom the assets of the trust should be distributed.

"We will file a petition with the probate court to reform the living trust with Christine Swanson's wishes," he said. "We will be asking for direction from the court on the beneficiaries."

Several charities and members of Swanson's family were mentioned in an unsigned 1996 will, according to Leach.

"It's a research and drafting exercise," Leach said. "We're trying to get this done in the next 90 days so we can get to a final close."

Monastery denies responsibility for Herma Smith-Curtis' fall

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE CARMELITE Monastery, sued by Carmel Realtor Herma Smith-Curtis and her husband, Donn Curtis, because she tripped on a broken stone step in front of the chapel last October, has denied any wrongdoing.

"Carelessness and negligence on the part of Plaintiffs caused and contributed" to her injuries, according to the response filed in Monterey County Superior Court.

Smith-Curtis, 70, said she simply filed her complaint to get reimbursed for her medical expenses, including ongoing physical therapy for a broken shoulder.

"One of the nuns told me, 'You should try to get paid for this,' and they told me to contact their insurance carrier," she explained. "But I had to file a lawsuit to get it taken seriously."

In her Feb. 20 complaint, Smith-Curtis said monastery employees were negligent in maintaining the stone steps in front of the chapel.

"They have these stones on the steps to the chapel and some of them are broken," she told The Pine Cone. "I got my toe caught, just like somebody was holding my foot, and I fell headfirst."

She sued the Carmel Monastery of Our Lady of St. Therese (O.C.D.) Disclaled Carmelite Nuns for costs of medical treatment, and earnings loss because she "has been, and will continue to be, prevented from attending to her occupation," according to the suit.

Smith-Curtis and her husband are asking for general monetary damages, special damages, interest at the rate of 10 percent, and costs of the suit. Donn Curtis is suing for loss of consortium.

The complaint and accompanying court summons were served on Mother Mercedes — acting on behalf of the monastery — by Jack Stern on Feb. 23.

"We're at the very early stages in the lawsuit and are trying to determine what actually happened out there," said the nuns' attorney, Melissa Kaufman, who was hired by the monastery's insurance carrier, Safeco.

The monastery's initial denial is simply based on lack of information, according to Kaufman.

"At this juncture, we're just trying to gather information — to find out what the people who witnessed it will say — and then in the long run we will determine if there's any liability," she said. "Obviously they are not happy about being sued, but they also feel for her and want it to be resolved in a fair manner."

Smith-Curtis said she would not take money from the monastery or the nuns, only from their insurance company.

"What would I do, take money from the collection plate?" she asked.

But if the monastery is found to be at fault, money could be paid to Smith-Curtis by the insurance company, the monastery, or both, according to Kaufman.

"One of the things we're concerned about is if this case goes to trial, the jury is not supposed to consider the fact that the monastery or any defendant has insurance," she said, adding that a defendant who loses a lawsuit may not be able to afford insurance coverage in the future.

Litigious past

According to court records, Smith-Curtis is no stranger to Monterey County Superior Court. Over the past three decades, she has been involved in dozens of lawsuits in the county, and has been the plaintiff in 15. Three of those are personal injury lawsuits.

On Aug. 5, 1993, Smith-Curtis sued William and Jean Crowson after she tripped on an uneven piece of concrete slab and fell while walking in the driveway of the Crowson's Monterey home on Trampani Circle. Smith-Curtis suffered a broken wrist and torn meniscus in both knees during the March 9, 1993, fall, according to court documents.

She sued for general negligence, loss of future earnings, general damages, medical and hospital expenses, incurred losses, loss of personal property, costs of the suit and other relief.

The case was set for trial when it was dismissed at the request of Smith-Curtis' attorney on May 24, 1995, after it was settled out

Police & Sheriff's Log

Why not The Pine Cone?

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Department last week.

SUNDAY, MAY 6

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Reported theft of three potted plants from the sidewalk area adjacent to San Carlos and Seventh. One cineraria plant and two Iceland poppies.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a water leak at Santa Rita and First. Located a small area where water appears to be slowly seeping out of the asphalt and running down the street. Public works to be notified.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a non-injury accident on Scenic. Collision was a minor rear-end type with parties in agreement to settle. Card exchange, no report.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Unknown caller reported being slapped by his former girlfriend on 05/02/01 as the pair sat inside their car on Scenic. Advised the caller to write a statement of the facts and come to the department to have the matter recorded by an officer. He said he did not wish prosecution. He only wanted it reported as a matter of record in the event she failed to properly raise their unborn child. Advised him this type of report would be of no use in future custody disputes.

Carmel area: Edgefield Place resident reported that someone defaced his van by spitting on it and placing a sticker on it. He feels he may be being followed and harassed by a Monterey resident.

Pebble Beach: Security spotted a man who appeared to be intoxicated while jogging on Marchetta Lane. The man ran from security but security found him on Hermitage Road. They detained him until sheriff's deputy arrived. He was transported to jail for public intoxication.

Carmel Valley: Responded to a 911 hangup at a Via Las Encinas residence. Subject stated teenagers at the residence were playing on the phone.

Carmel area: Aspen Place resident reported an unidentified noise coming from the area of The Crossroads which was keeping him awake. An area check for the source of the "humming" met with negative results.

MONDAY, MAY 7

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Citizen reported a poodle running around loose in the area of Mission and Sixth. While en route, resident advised that "Collette," her black French Canadian poodle, had wandered off in an unknown direction. Poodle located and reunited with owner.

SMASH-AND-GRAB THIEVES HIT THOMAS GALLERIES

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THIEVES TOOK a hammer to a glass window at Richard Thomas Galleries and made off with a $25,000 acrylic sculpture, Carmel Police Lt. Pete Poitras said this week.

The 32-inch-high, clear acrylic Michael Wilkinson sculpture, entitled "Temple," weighed about 50 pounds, which lead Poitras to conclude more than one thief was involved.

Although the store is equipped with an alarm, the system apparently malfunctioned and police learned of the burglary after city workers noticed the smashed glass and called police at 5:22 a.m. May 14.

"The alarm system didn't operate when the window was smashed," Poitras said. "It did activate when officers entered the building to investigate."

"The window was smashed, the thing was stolen, and nobody saw or heard anything," he said, adding that the caper probably took less than a minute.

Although several other smash-and-grab thefts have occurred in the city over the last couple of years — including incidents at the Elegant Set, Mark Areias Jewelers and Kocek Jewelers — Poitras said no concrete evidence links this burglary to those, nor to the thefts of other acrylic pieces recently taken from the Hanson Gallery.

"All possibilities are open, unfortunately," he said. "It is conceivable that our window smasher is back, though I certainly hope not, but it's also possible that since this is similar to other sculptures stolen — some very recently — that there is a tie between that, too."

Police are still investigating the burglary, including conducting forensic tests on the hammer and other evidence, according to Poitras.

Trees wear out their welcome

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE CARMEL Planning Commission took a major step towards removing more than 30 eucalyptus trees along Fourth Avenue May 16 when it voted unanimously to recommend that the city council adopt the plan's initial environmental study. Last June, the Carmel City Council requested a study on ridding the street of the towering trees.

Dozens of Fourth Avenue residents sent letters to the city and turned out in force at the meeting to encourage removal of the trees, which many have said are a hazard and should come down as soon as possible.

Tom O'Day, speaking for many residents, said a PG&E arborist had called the trees unsafe.

"It is my recommendation that these trees be removed for the long-term safety of the residents of Fourth Avenue," O'Day quoted from the arborist's letter.

The environmental study recommends replacing the trees with native species on a 3:1 ratio, but a comprehensive landscaping plan has not yet been developed, according to acting Carmel planning manager Chip Rerig.

No residents at the meeting opposed cutting down the trees, though one (with seven eucalyptus in front of her home) wondered if replanting at a 3:1 ratio was overkill.

"You're going to put 21 trees in front of my house? It seems like cypress have already been started, and some are over two stories high," Belle James said. "I just can't see a forest of 21 trees in my little walkway."

Rerig said that although the city council had directed staff to pursue removal of the trees, it has not yet budgeted funds for the project. The plan, which could take four to six weeks to complete, should be included in budget discussions next month, he said.

The commission directed staff to address numerous details in the project, including drainage issues, pedestrian access, traffic calming and the possibility of underground utilities.

"We need to have a professional landscape architect develop a plan for that area," Rerig said. "We may find we can't crowd 96 trees into that area, or maybe we can. It's going to be a matter of using our guidelines and policy for public way design, and it will be up to the forest and beach commission and the planning commission to determine an appropriate landscape plan for that area."

The forest and beach commission reviewed the initial study in April and May, and argued that it was inadequate because it failed to address issues of noise, windbreak and erosion, and did not include a rehabilitation plan for the site.

Acknowledging the necessity of removing unsafe trees, the planning commission recommended the city council approve the environmental review and immediately pursue taking down the trees and developing a landscape plan.

"I think we have some responsibility to recognize the urgency of this matter," commissioner Bart Bartron said before casting his vote.

Eucalyptus trees are native to Australia and were brought to California in large numbers during the 19th and early 20th centuries. Settlers hoped the fast-growing trees would be a source of lumber, but their brittle wood proved unsuitable. The hulking stand of trees on Fourth Avenue was probably planted in the 1870s by some of Carmel's earliest settlers, John Monroe Murphy and his wife, Anne. According to a Murphy great-granddaughter, the trees were not planted as wind breaks, but for the pharmaceutical use of their acorns, which were harvested, crushed and turned into a contraceptive suppository for women.

remodels in Del Monte Forest and surrounding communities.

At almost $170,000 per acre-foot, that water would be too expensive for some people who need it — a situation Pebble Beach officials hope to rectify by giving 45 acre-feet to the water district for sale at whatever price the district chooses.

"The company is here to help fix the community's water problem, and is willing to commit resources and assets to do so," Pebble Beach representative Alan Williams told The Pine Cone. "We're not looking to make a profit on this."

When the CAWD/PBCSD reclamation project began operating in 1994, it was designed to provide 800 acre-feet of treated water to be used on Pebble Beach Company's golf courses, which had been irrigated for decades with drinking water.

In exchange for guaranteeing the $34 million cost of the project, the company received a water entitlement of 365 acre-feet for the possible development of hundreds of new homes in Del Monte Forest. With the passage last November of Measure A and the elimination of most of those houses, the P.B. Co no longer needs so much water.

But the reclamation plant hasn't been producing as much usable water as anticipated, forcing the company and other golf courses to augment their reclaimed water irrigation with drinking water.

To fix this problem, engineers propose adding a reverse-osmosis facility to the Carmel sewage treatment plant and increasing water storage in the Forest Lake Reservoir. According to Pebble Beach Company Executive Vice President Mark Stilwell, the new project would provide 1,300 acre-feet of reclaimed water for use inside Pebble Beach and elsewhere.

All participants in this week's meeting acknowledged that many questions — including environmental review and what the state water board might say — have to be answered before the plan can get underway.

"We need to form our own checklist — including allocation, financing, the ordinance, how much staff time — and come up with a budget and time frame we can work with," said director Kris Lindstrom, who sits on the subcommittee with directors Ron Chesshire, Zan Henson and alternate

Molly Erickson. "But we need to move ahead quickly."

Chesshire suggested information be gathered and that a joint meeting of sewer district, Pebble Beach Community Services District and water management district board members be held to finalize the project.

"We would be delighted to get the right people to sit down with staff to see what documents need to be done, and try to begin to determine what you have to do to make this happen," said Lone Cypress Company board member Paul Leach. "We need a working group to move the ball forward, the sooner the better."

Grant money will boost Carmel police presence downtown

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE CARMEL Police Department now has permission to spend a $100,000 state grant and the interest it has accrued since being deposited in a city account last October, thanks to a unanimous Carmel City Council vote at a special meeting May 15.

The funds can only be used for front line law enforcement services — programs that increase the presence of police in the community — and can't help pay for existing programs or salaries, according to CPD Chief Floyd Sanderson.

The money, which was awarded to the city last September, must be used by June 30, 2002, or be returned to the state.

"Generally, money for front line law enforcement is not intended to be used for capital improvements or for administration," Sanderson told the council. "It's intended to put visible enforcement out into the community, within the context of community policing."

How to spend it

Sanderson recommended the city spend the banked $102,600 to:

- increase its paid officer positions from six to seven, which would cost $56,700, including benefits;

- purchase a four-wheel-drive Jeep Cherokee equipped with lights, radios, safety cage and other equipment, at a cost of $30,000;

- buy two police patrol bicycles, helmets, special uniforms, safety equipment and training, which would cost $8,900; and
- pay $7,000 for 175 hours of overtime.

As proposed, the plan creates a "special project team," using one officer from the force's regular staff and the other from the new position created by the grant funds, according to Sanderson.

The team could respond to any number of particular needs or unique situations and would not have to juggle those cases with normal calls, the chief said.

"It would be highly visible and guided by the community-problem-solving concept," according to Sanderson's report to the council.

The idea responds to prior direction from the city council that there be more police in certain areas of the city.

"One thing I heard from the council when I arrived was that you wanted more officers on the street and at the beach," city administrator Rich Guillen concurred.

Police as educators

City councilwoman Barbara Livingston asked if officers patrolling the beach area could carry literature with them that addresses the reasons behind certain rules, including where campfires are allowed and why people should not cut through the bluffs to get to the beach.

Sanderson said he thought the department could help with public education. "And if you turn the officers loose on this, they will come up with ideas you and I would have never thought of," he said.

Although the money will be used to pay for a new position in the department, continued funding is uncertain, Sanderson told the council. Candidates for the new position would be warned that the job may only last a year, but a longer career with the department could be likely since CPD tends to lose a couple of officers through attrition each year, according to the chief.

"If history repeats itself, in all probability we will have someone retire around May and will fill that position with this person," he said, admitting he was being somewhat optimistic about the timing.

Calling the plan "wonderful," councilwoman Paula Hazdovac moved approval. Councilman Gerard Rose seconded the motion, which was unanimously approved.

Rescuers find scores of steelhead dead in Carmel River

By SISSI MALEKI

THE FIRST rescue operation of juvenile steelhead in the receding Carmel River last weekend left rescuers upset at the high rate of death among the young trout.

Rescuers working along Hitchcock Creek were shocked early Saturday morning to find a hundred dead fish in a small pocket of water and an equal number struggling.

Geoff Malloway, project coordinator and owner of Central Coast Fly Fishing, attributed the deaths to the hot weather which accelerated the drying of the creek.

Maintaining healthy runs of steelhead trout, listed as threatened under the federal Endangered Species Act, is important because they are one of the species most vulnerable to changes in the river environment.

Saturday's 10-member team trapped nearly 1,000 juvenile steelhead. But of the 100 that were found alive in the pocket, more than half died shortly after capture, too stressed from the lack of oxygen in the tight space to survive.

and viruses," Branson said. "It's nature's way. There are hot spots [of oak moths] around the community — some years a few, or a whole block — but the oak moths have been progressing more and more through the community the past year or so. It's been a good number of years, maybe 14 or 15 years, since a heavy outbreak such as this. We want to reduce the number of worms."

Last week Branson said his department had from eight to 10 calls a day, mostly from residents at the southern end of town toward Santa Lucia, and on Carpenter from around 2nd Ave. down to around 8th Ave.

City arborist Ray Trabucco said, "These last two years have been mad. The populations of the oak moths are so high. You see that in nature: One population will get ridiculously high, then the predators come in."

In this case, the predators will be brought in — beneficial wasps that are shipped in egg form. When the oak moths begin flying around — in June and again later in September this year — they mate and lay eggs. "We'll synchronize the wasp release with this period," Branson said. The wasps attack the moth eggs so they don't develop into caterpillars.

Branson said about the only good by-product of the infestation is the frass — digested oak leaves which fall from the tree as powder. Residents who have to sweep up the mounds of powder may take heart to learn it is a beneficial fertilizer for the oak trees.

Because the city does not have an insect spray program, it has avoided the use of toxic pesticides, instead using strong jets of water to wash the caterpillars from the trees when they become a problem. But now with the proposed use of beneficial insects, a low-impact biological solution for pest control is hoped for.

Branson said that while the oaks, devoid of leaves, look dead, they are alive and will usually regenerate. "Generally the oaks can tolerate the oak worms, but it's the humans who have a tough time with them," he said.

Rescuers use a high-tech "electrofisher" to briefly stun the fish, then move them to a more suitable habitat, either in the main channel of the Carmel River or the reservoir above Los Padres Dam. Steelhead are born in freshwater streams, move to saltwater in the ocean, then return to the streams to spawn.

A 2 percent mortality rate has been the norm in the annual spring fish rescues in Carmel Valley. The 10 percent death rate that happened May 12 has been repeated twice before, according to Malloway.

Kevan Urquhart, a senior biologist supervisor with the state's department of fish and game, regrets that such rescues are even required.

"We wish conditions were better, but it's all a by-product of reduced rainfall and increased use of water from the basin," said Urquhart.

Dumping domestic waste into creeks and rivers, which is illegal, exacerbates the problem. Malloway said even organic materials he's found in the river, such as kitchen garbage and old potted plants, can end up killing the fish.

On an emergency rescue Wednesday in Potrero Creek, they found the water thick with mowed grass clippings which often contain fertilizer, an oxygen-depleting pollutant.

At Saturday's rescue, team members saw so much cat litter in the creek, a key spawning area, that they initially thought it was part of the bank.

Malloway said he is eagerly waiting for the results of a major DNA analysis on migrating fish to trace their bloodlines, a study undertaken by the National Marine Fisheries Service.

"We want to see how important the tributary fish are to the rest of the steelhead river population" Malloway explained.

The addition of another fish ladder at Los Padres Dam has boosted the steelhead run and, together with better operation of water releases, has contributed to more steelhead crossing the dam during last winter's spawning phase than at any other time since 1962, said Dave Dettman, senior fisheries biologist with the water management district.

And the goal of the new Carmel River Watershed Council is to minimize conflict between special interest groups and government agencies while protecting the Carmel River watershed's natural resources.

Barney Scollan, rescue team member and owner of Carmel Bay Company, gave credit for the local efforts to Malloway's dedication.

"He's absolutely amazing," Scollan said. "He'll check all the potential trouble spots every morning on his way to work and then organize the rescues from his store."

Mondavi, Earthbound & Passionfish team for Chef Walk

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

TAKE A walk through Earthbound Farm's fields of green with Passionfish restaurant's owner/chef Ted Walter and Earthbound's farming director Mark Marino from 10 a.m. until noon Saturday, May 19, and, laden with a basket of produce picked on the walk, refresh yourself with an informal tasting of Robert Mondavi's coastal wines.

Winemaker Jeff Kasavan will assist in pairing Mondavi coastal wines with the sample dishes prepared by Chef Walter for participants after the walk. The cost is $20 for adults, $5 for children and space is limited. For reservation at the Farm Stand, located at 7250 Carmel Valley Road, Carmel Valley, call 625-6219.

Cannery Row's Balestreri honored with prestigious award

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

TED J. BALESTRERI, chairman and CEO of the Cannery Row Company/Sardine Factory in Monterey, was honored with the Ellis Island Medal of Honor award on May 12 at a gala ceremony in the Great Hall on Ellis Island, New York Harbor. The ceremony was sponsored by the National Ethnic Coalition of Organizations (NECO).

Balestreri, past chairman of the Board of National Restaurant Association and trustee emeritus of the National Restaurant Association Educational Foundation, was nominated for the prestigious award by Leon Panetta, who said the award "honors all those people who embody the American dream."

Balestreri was also congratulated by National Restaurant Association president and CEO Steven C. Anderson who said, "Ted's vision, talent and hard work have strengthened the restaurant industry and elevated it to new heights. He has helped make this industry the cornerstone of this country's economy and communities."

This year's Ellis Island Medal of Honor recipients included leaders in business, politics, medicine, arts, sports, military, labor and education. Former recipients include six U.S. presidents.

STILL MORE PERFORMING GROUPS REQUEST USE OF FOREST THEATER

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

WHILE THE Community and Cultural Commission grapples with complaints from several neighbors about noise and parking problems at the city's fabled Forest Theater, they are also confronted with new requests from drama and dance organizations for performance dates.

Currently Pacific Repertory Theater and the Forest Theater Guild have annual rental contracts with the city for back-to-back summer performance schedules on the outdoor stage starting in May and ending in mid-October. Representatives of Carmel Performing Arts Festival, Western Stage and Dance Kids of Monterey County and Carmel Ballet now want stage time, too.

Robin McKee, producing artistic director of Carmel Performing Arts Festival (CPAF), now in its fifth year of a two-and-a-half week October festival, told the commission that she would like to be able to book the Forest Theater "as we do the Sunset Theater and the Scout House. We rent from the city, but have to get clearance from Pacific Repertory Theater because they have their sets and lights still there [when CPAF uses the facility]. McKee said the best month and nights for CPAF shows at the Forest Theater would be Friday and Saturday nights in October "and on other times it's not in use." She said that Sunday matinees would be desirable, too.

"We're not a fly-by-night organization," McKee told the commission. "We turn money into the city. We brought in $11,000 in one year for revenue to the city. What we need is a couple of weeks or more that the outdoor theater would be available to us."

Alan Harrison, managing director of The Western Stage, Salinas, said the theater organization would like to have use of the facility from Nov. 1 to 31, as weather permits. "In our case, seventy-five percent of rehearsals are done off site," he said, indicating that Western Stage's presence in the outdoor theater predominately would be set building and on-stage performances.

Representing Dance Kids of Monterey County and Carmel Ballet, Alan Richmond told the commission the two groups would like to use the Forest Theater for its ballet performances, "especially with Sunset Theater being down." Richmond said that evenings would suit the dance groups, indicating that Friday, Saturday and Sunday would be their evenings of choice.

"A lot of current users are concerned," Sunset Cultural Director Brian Donoghue observed, then stated flatly, "An additional expansion is not necessarily going to take place. Stephen [Moorer of PRT] has said they cannot afford to do any less."

"You need 16 or 17 performances of one play to make any money," Moorer concurred, indicating that a cutback in PRT performance schedules would wreak havoc with its income and budget.

A theater with no walls

Referring to the Forest Outdoor Theater as a "theater that has no walls," commissioner Antonia Verleye said she was hearing nothing at the meeting about adjusting performances to make use of the theater more acceptable to neighbors. "Are you trying to do productions that are more suited to the theater or down-scaling your productions in elaborateness more in keeping with a simplified format?" she asked Moorer. Verleye said the elaborateness of recent work "has upset the out-of-bounds" of the theater, and that "everyone is going to have to bite the bullet a little to bring it back into balance."

Moorer countered with historical data, saying that in the past, "The Forest Theater has had the most elaborate sets of any theater on the peninsula. The whole town would turn out to build two-story sets," he said, referring to productions in the early years of the Forest Theater in the '20s and earlier.

"We need to meet everyone's needs," Verleye responded, addressing complaints the commission has received from neighbors whose homes border the outdoor theater located on Mountain View and Santa Rita.

Commissioner Francyne Laney said the commission was looking forward to results of a sound study currently under way so that noise levels could be addressed, and asked Roger Parkes, president of the Forest Theater Guild, if his group had discussed proposed dark nights — nights when the theater would remain unused.

Parkes said the guild is in opposition to dark nights because it had already willingly given up rehearsal nights at the theater so that the stage could be used for films in the Forest. The guild currently rents rehearsal space from the school district. "We don't make a lot of money on the films. This is something we do for the community," he said.

Commissioner Linda Anderson said she didn't think the neighbors were concerned with rehearsals, but that showing of films was more disruptive because filmgoers brought cars into the neighborhood and that films were shown to 10:30 or 11 at night, due to the necessity of waiting until dusk to commence.

Rescuing the meeting from a prolonged discussion that was not producing concrete plans for usage of the theater, commission chair Denny Gambill proposed that an ad hoc committee of two — he and co-chair Anderson — review Forest Theater plans for the year 2002 and come back to the commission at the next regular commission meeting on June 18 with several options to consider for use of the theater after he and Anderson have had time to review calendar schedules and audience attendance records.

The next regular meeting of the commission is Monday, May 21 at 3:30 p.m. in the Bingham Room at Sunset Center.

Dick Crispo discusses California springtime and mission paintings

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA impressionist painters who captured springtime in their paintings, and Northern California tonalists who painted mission architecture, will be the subject of a free lecture and slide show by artist/art historian Dick Crispo.

The evening event is planned for 7 o'clock on Wednesday, May 23 at the Carmel Art Association at Dolores between Fifth and Sixth avenues, Carmel-by-the-Sea.

"California Paintings of Spring, and Mission Architecture" will include works by William Wendt, Xavier Martinez, Granville Redmond and other notable artists who painted during the time span of 1880 to the 1940s. For details call 624-6176.

Peggy Olsen's oils are shown in the Beardsley Room at the CAA through June 6.

OLSEN, JELMINI GIVEN SOLO SHOWS AT CAA; GALLERY SHOWCASE FEATURES THREE ARTISTS

TWO SOLO shows and a three-artist display as the May Gallery Showcase currently are mounted at the Carmel Art Association to run through June 6.

Artist Peggy Olsen, in remission from cancer for nine years, believes painting is her source of strength and a way to enjoy living. Her bold oil paintings of agrarian scenes are sought after by collectors, and she is currently offering giclée prints of several of her paintings made available through the CAA website: www.carmelart.org

Another Peggy, Peggy Jelmini, is also being given a solo show of landscapes in oil — California vineyards, valleys and orchards influenced by the impressionist and expressionist schools — which capture the light of seasons and times of day.

The Gallery Showcase for the month of May will feature three artists in the Bernard Segal gallery to the right of the foyer. The distinctive paintings of Alex Gonzales, Heidi Hybl and Dick Crispo will be shown.

The CAA galleries are located on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth avenues, Carmel-by-the-Sea. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. For information, call 624-6176.

The heavens smiled for Tor House garden party

NOT SO many moons ago, you had to answer endless questions on a form about your personal habits, to end up on some mass marketing list and be deluged with junk mail.

Of course, once you got to the point where they asked you whether you normally skipped or shuffled to the loo in the middle of the night, your privacy antenna would quiver with indignation, leading you to slam the pen down and say, "I think I can live without the free samples of dog kibble."

Now it's sooo much easier. Or so you are led to believe.

For it takes your hand only a nanosecond to set off a deluge of — junk e-mail.

And if you think you're too smart to get caught because you never give out your e-mail address, look what just happened to one brilliant person — moi — and think again:

While feeding my rapacious intellect by reading the New York Times online, my eye caught a teaser headline: "H2O best cleaner for household."

Always looking for cleaning shortcuts, I assumed it was about a scientific discovery that would allow me to let sinks overflow and get that water to clean on its own.

I thanked my roving eye and . . . clicked on that headline.

To my horror, I found myself staring at a splashy — no pun intended — web infomercial for a mega electric steam cleaner!

As if that wasn't bad enough, another window popped up to inform me that, in sum, "they" now knew I existed and would come to my screen regularly to say "Hello!"

Oh, and photos of the machine as it grew bigger would pop up, too.

In a flash, I had an out-of-body experience.

I saw myself shaking my monitor while crying and screaming, "NO! NO! I didn't want to click! Honestly, it was a mistake! Let me take my click back!"

Now, I'm considering seeing a shrink for my continuing post-traumatic stress hallucinations . . .

In a flash, I had an out-of-body experience.

I saw myself shaking my monitor while crying and screaming, "NO! NO! I didn't want to click! Honestly, it was a mistake! Let me take my click back!"

Now, I'm considering seeing a shrink for my continuing post-traumatic stress hallucinations . . .

Here's Carol Krantz getting Alex Vardemis to pick the lucky raffle winner at the Tor House garden party.

IF I TELL you it was time for the Tor House Garden Party on May 6th, does that immediately bring to mind teeth-chattering cold and wind?

Well, this time the weather was heavenly and the party was packed — both indoors where an English tea was being served — and outdoors where there were silent auction items galore.

Edie Karas, Bev Flippen and Jane Holmes controlled the entrance while trustee Al Giovanni chatted with guests such as Bonny McGowan.

Al is a stonemason and became intrigued with all the stonework of Tor House. He was given an introduction to the historical site by Una Jeffers Honscheid, the poet's granddaughter and then was recruited as a trustee. "It's a good thing I didn't scare him off!" Una joked.

One pair of friends, Monica Schefski and Jeanne Ruden, have been coming from San Jose to this party for years.

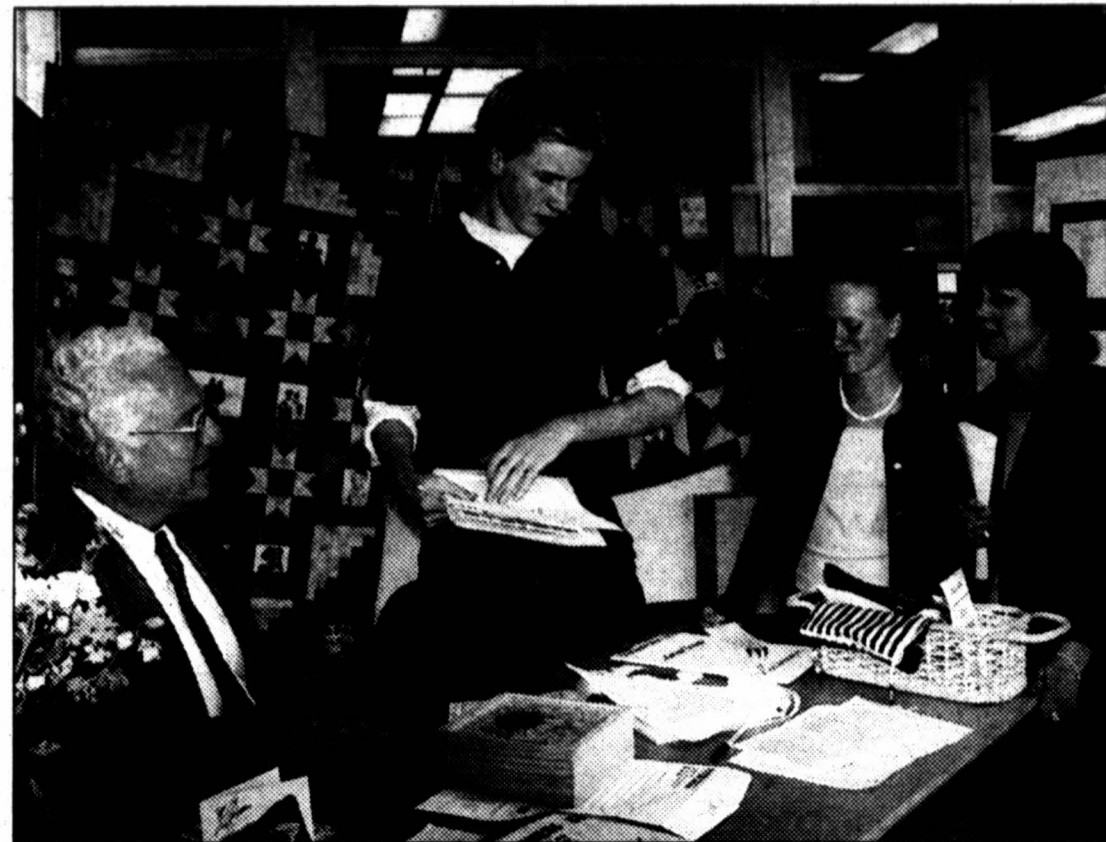

"We really enjoy the festivities," Monica said.

This time, though, it was a challenge getting down here for these ladies.

"We had to take a back road used by farmers to avoid all the heavy traffic," explained Jeanne.

Principal Jan Zettel, artist and award winner Owen Cook, Chelsea Davy, 14, and Bella Brancato all turned out for the Carmel High School barbecue.

PHOTOS/ SISSI MALEKI

Another couple of friends, Ann Zuhr and Muriel Brem, drove down from Gilroy along with several other ladies.

Peg Chadwick, a church administrator, chatted with Terre Martin and her son, Terrence, who was visiting.

Peg was singing the praises of Terre as their "volunteer of everything!" adding, "And the others don't do it as quickly!"

Is her son as efficient in life?

"Oh no, I missed out on the whole organization thing," he replied. "But she really tried, like when she'd get us [he and his siblings] to pull out Mr. Clean and wash the walls of our handprints."

Dennis Marshall took a nice stand for equal rights by walking around with a tray of cookies and very graciously offering them to guests.

Docent Barbara Diamond did a very charming job of persuading guests to bid on an antique porcelain soup bowl set.

Barbara Bolgard was a very happy puppy, finally having a new dog in the house.

"On our first walk we ran into [Mayor] Sue McCloud," she recounted, "so she's obviously very politically astute!"

She also spoke of having just discovered the existence of car seat harnesses for dogs.

"I think many would love to know they exist," she said.

Carol Krantz helped board president Alex Vardemis pick the winners of the prize drawing out of a silver bowl.

Wendy Thorpe was here visiting her 81-year-old grandfather, Rowland Thorpe. An Englishman by origin, Rowland is well versed in the benefits of "tea."

"He didn't allow me to make breakfast because he said he was going to load up on this spread!" she said, amazed.

In the small room that held souvenirs for sale were some beautiful Japanese tissue paper fresh flower vases.

Mary Aldinger made sure to inform admirers that Pauline Allen and Margaret Mise had put these together. "They're the creators!"

The arts, parents and students come together at high school

On May 10, Carmel High School was the site of the Visual and Performing Arts Assembly (VAPA) and Open House.

Thanks to efforts of faculty such as Bella Brancato, parents and students had the opportunity to view artworks by students and enjoy a barbecue.

"Professional volunteers" Noni McVey and Jeanne Hale were instrumental in persuading parents of the value of socializing together with students.

"We're the fun and friendly booster club," said Noni.

MPC's Diane Bower is on the advisory board of the school's Apparel Design Program and was impressed by the quality of work she saw.

"The quilts are absolutely wonderful!" she said.

Ron Cook enjoyed a burger outside with wife Deborah Streeter, while his 18-year-old son, Owen, an award-winning artist, guided visitors through the school's art exhibits.

Deborah is a minister and Ron is a retired teacher who loves to work on his home in Palo Colorado.

"I've been building a house for 32 years," he joked.

Deborah made a point of crediting the art faculty at the school. "They have very fine art teachers and that's really rare in public schools."

The two said Owen was considering attending an art school in Seattle after taking a year off to finish a film he's been making.

Teacher Beth Cochran walked around with one more month to go in her pregnancy. She recently moved here from Pennsylvania with her hubby John Stiff.

Dorothy Stiegler had come with friend Paula Bertucci. Dorothy's the mother of Lindsay, 17, who is the student council vice president, while Paula's daughter, Nicole, 18, is the "Social Commissioner."

That sounded like a plum job . . .

"Yes, unless the dance bombs," Paula responded, adding with a smile, "then you're in big trouble!"

■ Forest Theater celebrated

The exhibit opening for the Forest Theater history organized jointly by Carmel Heritage Society and the Forest Theater Guild took place May 11 at the First Murphy House.

Thanks to the work of Guild board members, such as Jean Snow, compiling old material, guests could turn back time by viewing albums filled with news clippings on productions, photos and such.

An extra treat was seeing a selection from the first annual High School All-Star Theatrical Production, "Kiss Me Kate".

Guild Executive Director Hamish Tyler explained this was a pilot program to highlight young talent from throughout the county.

Cast members who performed on this day were Shawn Levin, Sarah Winkleblack and Marya Hicks.

Realtor Roger Parkes, who's serving his third term as Guild president, recently got the unenviable task of selling the home of his good friends and neighbors, Jan & Bob Fisher, who are moving north of San Francisco.

Jan has been an integral part of this community, active in many ways including her stint on the Planning Commission. And as Roger pointed out, "It was her idea to have Carmel Heritage join with the Guild for this exhibit."

"It'll be a new adventure for us," said Jan, of their upcoming move. Nonetheless, the Fishers will be greatly missed.

Pam Klaumann and Heritage board member Renate Wunsch staffed the entry, greeting arrivals with smiles and greetings.

Renate has been in charge of planning & organizing the group's exhibits for several years. But despite the challenge of coming up with new and interesting exhibit ideas every few months, she has continued attracting the public's attention to the group's activities.

Bob Kohn, a new Guild board member, attended, eager to be involved in current activities.

"It's a tremendous opportunity to do things for the community that will leverage my experience," he stated.

Bob, a former general counsel for Borland, just sold his music company, E-

Music, to Universal. But he also owns Laugh.Com, a web site that taps into top comedic talent such as Milton Berle, Red Buttons and Phyllis Diller.

(Latest one from Red: "When you're 82, they don't X-ray you any more — they just hold you to the light!")

Bev Leinbach, who had helped organize last year's Don Blandings exhibit, chatted with Kay Prine, who leads Saturday tours of Carmel for the Society.

Kay is currently training to be a docent at the Presidio of Monterey Museum.

Some of the buzz around was about the great food at the reception, donated by Mary's Cooking Tonight and Whole Foods, and Heritage board members were very appreciative.

Jean Draper and daughter Susan caught up with out-of-town cousins, Brian & Sara Leidig.

The Leidigs live in Redding where, according to Brian, the real estate doesn't "boom" as in other places.

And when Jean suggested, "Take the dot-comers up there, then," Brian joked, "They can't afford it any more!"

Holly Stock is a new resident, having moved here from Florida only eight months ago. "It's been a 20-year dream to live here," she said, adding, "I just went through an awful two-year divorce and my reward was Carmel."

Holly's currently busy finding sponsors for the upcoming Films in the Forest.

Peter & Gisela Murray sat with Alice & Bill Englander, exchanging notes on life in Carmel, while waiting for the show to begin.

The Murrys came here in 1969 and decided they'd love to live here one day.

"It took us 30 years to get here!" said Peter, a retired IBM executive.

■ Golfers raise dollars to battle breast cancer

In the Pink was the order of the day at a golf tournament and luncheon at Carmel Valley Ranch on May 9.

Barbie Burdick and the Carmel Valley Ranch Women's Golf Association pulled off a sold-out event of 150 to benefit Breast Cancer Action Group (BCAG) of the Monterey Peninsula.

More specifically, proceeds — which netted $11,000 — are earmarked for the $25,000 endowment pledge made by BCAG for CHOMP's new Breast Care Center.

Some of the winning golf team leaders included Jill Fanucchi, Kasmin Chappell and Peggy Kelly. Also, many of the tournament's players were breast cancer survivors.

Peggy Gaspary and Rita Reiman chose to sit out this tournament, and instead decorate the tables with the cheerful pink and white theme. "We had a ball doing it!" Peggy said.

Rita's a former tennis player who has now taken up golf.

Why did she quit tennis?

"It hurt!" she replied, laughing.

Wendell Breithaupt, whose wife Dee served on the event committee, was recruited to handle auction proceedings.

"I never saw a group have so many meetings!" he marveled. "They worked very long and hard."

A retired banker from Princeton, Wendell plays golf when not caught up in his wife's projects.

The other husbands participating were Donna Tucker's Lee and event committee member Pam Michels' Bruce.

Cancer survivor Jackie Pierce, outgoing board president of BCAG, spoke of the state-of-the-art center being set up by CHOMP with the help of such donations.

"This center will equal or be better than what you can find elsewhere," Jackie promised.

By the way, she just celebrated the third anniversary of the day she found out she had breast cancer — right after her 40th birthday.

Carmel's own Ciji Ware returns with her latest historical Southern novel

HISTORY BLENDS with past and present in this new Ciji Ware novel set in the South. "A Light on the Veranda" is what Ciji — a Carmel High and Harvard University grad — calls a "stand alone sequel" to her best-selling "Midnight on Julia Street."

"Veranda" picks up where "Midnight" left off: Ciji fans will recall that Daphne Duvalon fled her own wedding in New Orleans, leaving behind her cheating fiancé, to resume musical studies at Julliard. "Veranda" finds Daphne, two years later, returning to the south to play the harp at her brother's wedding, and once there, decides she can't return to the rat race of New York City where she has been leading the life of a classical harpist.

Set in Natchez, Miss., "the city that time forgot," "Veranda" captures the character of the city and its inhabitants as Daphne pursues her music studies — this time jazz — and forms an all-woman jazz ensemble. She meets a

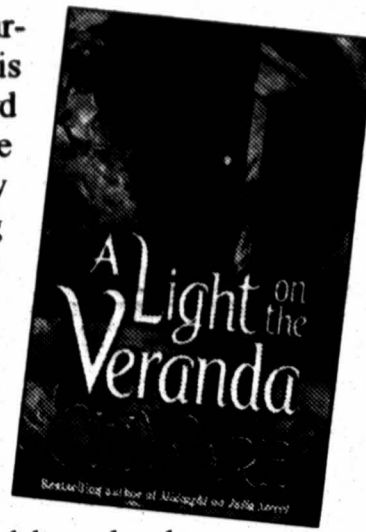

San Francisco photographer who has come to Natchez to photograph birds — the surviving species that Audubon painted in the region in the 1820s. Romance blooms as she joins the photographer in trying to prevent a potential toxic dump from destroying wildlife at a nearby bird sanctuary. Ciji's dialogue flows in natural speech rhythms with the ring of verisimilitude, and her historic research is impeccable.

Ciji brings to her historic novel writing the skill of a longtime, award-winning television journalist, and she will discuss just this at a 7 p.m. talk on the Thunderbird patio tonight, Friday, May 18, as she addresses members of May Waldroup's "Pebbles" writing group. In an interview with The Pine Cone, Ciji told us she will discuss how she brings the research techniques of a reporter to her craft as a novelist. Those interested in writing as a profession are invited to the free gathering tonight, which will be followed by a book-signing. Ciji will show some fascinating slides of Natchez and the Monmouth Plantation Hotel which she used as a setting in "Veranda" and which appears as its cover art. The author will return to The Thunderbird Bookshop at 1 p.m., Saturday, May 19 for a reading and signing.

Ciji Ware in Natchez

Ciji, who grew up in Carmel-by-the-Sea, (Carmel High Class of '60) comes from a long line of writers, and is the author of six books, including one work of nonfiction. She lives in San Francisco with her husband, Tony Cook, in a Julia Morgan-designed Nob Hill building.

"A Light on the Veranda" is published by Ivy Books, The Ballantine Publishing Group, a division of Random House, Inc., New York (paperback, $6.99)

The Thunderbird is located at 3600 The Barnyard Shopping Village, Carmel. For information, call 624-1803.

JO-ANN MAPSON is a freelance reporter for the Anchorage News and writes book reviews for the Boston Globe and L.A. Times. But her latest novel (she has published five previous books) is set right here in Carmel Valley and Carmel-by-the Sea — although fictionalized names are used.

The protagonist of "Bad Girl Creek" inherits a flower farm in the Central Coast valley, and because she is confined to a wheelchair, seeks the assistance of three women whom she invites onto her farm — all in dire need of a home and an income. The ensuing friendship of four disparate women and the transforming power of love is the crux of the novel.

In an interview with The Pine Cone, Jo-Ann Mapson told us she was attracted to Carmel Valley while visiting her son Jack in Monterey. But before moving to Anchorage, Mapson lived in California for 45 years and "was always intrigued with the flower farms she saw up and down the coast. "Flowers are fragile in appearance but difficult to grow," she said, which is a wonderful metaphor for friendship, which the book is about.

Cutting-edge artists at Big Sur Experimental Music Festival

FAST ON the heels of the Big Sur JazzFest, the Third Annual Big Sur Experimental Music Festival takes off this weekend beginning Saturday, May 19. Adventurous modern music including electronic, experimental, improv and ambient stylings will be showcased at the Henry Miller Memorial Library throughout the day both Saturday and Sunday.

Plugged In

By Stephen L. Vagnini

Saturday's concert begins at noon with a performance by electronica wizard Steev Hise of San Francisco and will conclude with the first time public performance of the BSXMF 2001 Large Ensemble.

Sunday's program begins at 1 p.m. and also runs into the evening. Performers from throughout the world will appear at this cutting edge festival including Boris Hauf from Austria, the Franco Degrassi/Gianni Lenoci Duo from Italy and The Clocked-Out Duo from Australia. For a complete schedule, check out the website www.henrymiller.org or call 667-2574.

Also this weekend, the 42nd Annual Castroville Artichoke Festival features a classic car show, Marilyn Monroe look-a-like contest, parade down Main Street and a plethora of live music. Scheduled to perform on Saturday, May 19, at the festival main stage is an assortment of blues, country and Latin music including Little Sister and the Bad Intentions, Eight Second Ride, Dr. Loco's Rockin Jalapeno Band and Mumbo Gumbo.

Sunday's lineup includes Noah's Classic Rhythm

Makers, Red Beans & Rice, Mariachi of California and Steve Lucky and the Rhumba Bums. Music starts at 10:30 a.m. both days. Admission is $6 for adults and $3 for children under 12. Check out their website at www.artichoke-festival.org.

Jazz continues to thrive at Monterey Peninsula venues with the Jazz & Blues Company leading the way. Appearing at the Carmel venue tonight (May 18) is pianist Amina Figarova, a native of Baku, Azerbaijan (a former state of the Soviet Union). A classical piano major and former professor at the Conservatory of Baku, Figarova moved to the United States in 1992 to study at the Berklee College of Music in Boston.

In 1998 she was invited to study at the Thelonius Monk Jazz Colony in Aspen, Colorado where she recorded the album "Another Me," a mix of funk, fusion, r&b and jazz. In March of 1992 she moved to San Francisco to perform with Dmitri Matheny.

She performs tonight along with Matheny on flugelhorn, Bart Platteau on flute and bassist Ruth Davies. Tickets are $25. Music starts at 7:30 p.m. Call 624-6431.

At the Monterey Hyatt tonight (May 18) Monterey Jazz Festival General Manager and booker Tim Jackson plays flute with the David Morwood Jazz Quartet. The following Friday (May 25), local pianist and educator Biff Smith performs with David Morwood and Pete Lips, and headlines the end of the month Sunday jazz jam session at the Hyatt before heading off to Berklee College of Music to teach jazz. Music at the Hyatt Lounge is free. Call 372-1234.

Laureate, Ric Masten, and photographer Douglas Steakley will present a free slide show and poetry reading from their very beautiful book, "Pacific Light, Images of the Monterey Peninsula," at 7 p.m., Friday, May 25 at Santa Catalina School's performing arts center/auditorium. A booksigning will follow. For information, call Carmel Publishing Company "Books From the New Bohemia," at 659-7221. Santa Catalina is located on Mark Thomas Drive in Monterey.

THE BOOKSHELF

Mapson's "Bad Girl"—published in hardcover by Simon and Schuster, New York, New York, $24—is an alternate selection of the Literary Guild, Doubleday Book Club and Book-of-the-Month Club. Mapson told us it is the first in a trilogy. She is just finishing the second book, "Along Came Mary," and "Goodbye, Earl" will be the third.

You can meet and chat with Jo-Ann Mapson at a book-signing at 7 p.m. Tuesday, May 23 at Bay Books in downtown Monterey—316 Alvarado St. For information, call 375-1855.

GAIL REEVES, who has worked with Carmel-by-the-Sea's Chapman Gallery for five years, does human and animal portraiture by commission. She has illustrated a book written by Nancy Plotkin of Bel Air, "Pockets... Full of Love," a story for adults and children alike. The protagonist, Pockets, a border terrier, tells her story of how she deals with the ups and downs of life and those of her family. An enchanting tale, enchantingly illustrated. There will be a booksigning from noon to 2:30 p.m. on Saturday, May 19 at the Thunderbird Bookshop, The Barnyard Shopping Village, Carmel. For information, call 624-1803.

PUNCH & PUNDITS Literary Tea is set for 2 p.m., Sunday, May 20 in the Church of the Wayfarer social hall, corner of Lincoln and Seventh Ave., Carmel-by-the-Sea. Sponsored by Friends of the Harrison Memorial Library, the literary tea will feature artist Joseph B. Nordmann of Pacific Grove, scientist, environmentalist and teacher. He will speak on "Nature as a Subject to Paint," and will demonstrate drawing and pen painting. An extensive showing of Nordmann's paintings of Pacific Grove scenes, from the air, land and sea, has recently been shown in Pacific Grove and at the CAA, Carmel. The meeting is free and the public is invited. Refreshments will be served.

DEREK WALCOTT, 1992 Nobel Prize for Literature recipient, will read from his works at 7 p.m., Wednesday, May 23 in the college theater at Monterey Peninsula College, 980 Fremont St., Monterey. Joseph Brodsky has described Walcott as "the best poet the English language has today." Tickets are $10. Seating is limited, so call right away for ticket information: 646-4063.

From the Heart Benefit Day

From the Heart connects those in the community who love to share through sewing and quilting with those who need that very attention and love. Volunteers in the Monterey County area, be it through guilds, schools or individuals, create comfort quilts, dolls, tote bags, scrapbooks and other items for kids who find themselves in need of that extra caring touch. The funds raised by the Borders Benefit Day will supply the much-needed supplies for the project. Community volunteers will supply the stitches and the love! Call Sarge at 757.7753 if you'd like to become one of those volunteers. All skill levels are welcome.

SAFETY

students. It's a hazard to our neighborhood and school," Williams told the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

Williams was joined by parents and teachers from Tularcitos in urging the supervisors to close the airstrip, but since their testimony a year ago, the school has not done anything special to prepare for an air crash on campus.

"We don't do any airplane crash drills," Williams told The Pine Cone. "We don't want to create anxiety levels among our students that are unwarranted."

Williams said there is no requirement that teachers be certified in CPR nor trained in advanced first aid at Tularcitos, although a few individuals in the office and the P.E. teacher do have certifications, and "some teachers may have learned CPR on their own."

In contrast, three dozen people — all of the teachers and staff who live on campus at Santa Catalina — are certified for both CPR and advanced first aid, and they have a nurse on staff 14 hours every day, according to Broeck Oder, history teacher and director of emergency planning for the school. Likewise, at York, "all teachers are staff are CPR-certified, and a large number are first-aid certified," according to safety coordinator and teacher Bill Scott, who said the eighth through 12th graders are drilled four times a year on how to respond to a crash or other disaster on campus.

In addition, Santa Catalina puts every child in the school — pre-kindergartners through high school seniors — through a sophisticated "fallen airplane" drill annually; the most recent was last month.

"Every member of the faculty and staff gets a sealed envelope with a bright yellow 'affected area' shown on a map of campus and a preselected plane crash disaster scenario inside," Oder explained. "When they open that envelope, they have to immediately respond by moving all students to the safest of our two assembly zones: the Performing Arts Center at the southern end of campus or the athletic field at the far north. We have two dozen people with UHF-band radios on campus so we can communicate with each other; Our first concern is to take roll to make sure no one is missing and immediately begin a search for anyone who is."

The fallen aircraft drill is in addition to the normal fire evacuation and earthquake drills required at all schools.

Oder said Santa Catalina has done the fallen aircraft drill since 1989 at the recommendation of the Federal Aviation Administration.

"The FAA says 90 percent of all airplane crashes fall within 1,000 yards of the airport runway and Santa Catalina is that close," he said.

Tularcitos is actually closer to the Carmel Valley Airport, but to the side, rather than directly under the take-off or landing pattern, and "no planes fly directly overhead," according to Principal Williams. He believes the airport is "perfectly safe" now, but wants it closed to prevent any future increase in flights.

"I have no problem with the airport operating at its current level," he told The Pine Cone. "A proposal to increase its use, improve the runway to bring in more and bigger planes is unacceptable."

able. And the only way they are going to prevent increased use is to close the airport."

However, state law prevents any expansion of "nonconforming uses" which would include the C.V. Airport, designated "nonconforming" decades ago. So since the airport is not allowed to expand, and if it poses no hazard to the children now, why close it?

Some have called the child-safety argument a red herring because it sounds better than, "We don't like the noise" or "We'd rather have a park." But it is an illogical argument, according to Monterey Peninsula Airport General Manager Denis Horn.

"The issue at Tularcitos or anywhere else is not safety. Otherwise, they would have to argue that airports are unsafe places to have terminals because of all the people gathered there, or shopping centers and homes in the flight path are not safe. The argument starts to get ridiculous. In fact, it's not a safety concern; it's usually about noise, traffic or other similar impacts."

NEW TRIAL

would say only that suing Eastwood was "hugely difficult." She referred all further questions to her Oakland attorney, Paul Rein, who specializes in ADA lawsuits. Rein did not return calls.

Courtroom sources said the plea for a new trial — which contains numerous emotional references to the civil rights struggles of the 1960s — is unlikely to succeed because Judge Ware strongly supported the jury's verdict in several rulings made after the trial.

In demanding a new trial, Rein alleged that an erroneous verdict resulted from a series of mistakes made by Judge Ware coupled with a star-struck jury that Rein claims was bedazzled by Eastwood's presence in the courtroom. His new petition claims that "justice is not served" if Eastwood is "given a free pass" to violate federal and state handicapped-accessibility requirements.

"I guess Rein figures he's got to make hay while he still can," Eastwood responded. He said Rein is just one example of a national group of lawyers who prey on small business owners, obtaining substantial settlements by alleging minor ADA violations. Eastwood has supported efforts in Congress to put an end to the ADA lawsuit industry — a movement that is gaining momentum.

"The suit against Eastwood illustrates the reckless disregard for people's rights shown by shakedown artists and trial lawyers," said Congressman Mark Foley of Florida, who has led the fight for ADA reform. During Congressional hearings last year, he said one lawyer in his district filed more than 600 lawsuits against small businesses.

Late last month, Foley picked up a substantial ally when Hawaii Senator Daniel Inouye — who lost his right arm in World War II combat — introduced an ADA amendment that would require businesses to be notified of an alleged violation and be given 90 days to fix the problem before an ADA lawsuit could be filed.

"Please be assured that I simply want to close a loophole in the ADA that unscrupulous lawyers have exploited," Inouye said in comments on the Senate floor.

"Daniel Inouye is a champion for the disabled and his support gives momentum and credibility to our move to reform the ADA," Foley told The Pine Cone.

Eastwood's attorney, Chuck Keller, filed a response this week asking Judge Ware not to grant a new trial.

"Mrs. zum Brunnen had every opportunity, represented by able counsel and in front of a fair judge, to persuade the jury that her rights had been violated. The jury didn't believe her and there's simply no justification for the court to order that a new trial be held," Keller said.

"When Rein sued me, he got somebody who wasn't afraid to fight, and with Congress getting involved, this whole thing has come back to haunt him," said Eastwood.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Almost thirty-eight percent of older Americans experience dizziness. Dizziness can be caused by a variety of factors. According to a study published in the Annals of Internal Medicine, dizzy spells can be a chronic condition. The source of dizziness can be traced to the inner ear. Often, as a result of aging, lower blood circulation and delayed reflexes can effect this delicate balancing system. Viral infections and structural injuries can disrupt the circular canals in the inner ear. A number of treatable disorders such as coronary-artery disease, damaged blood vessels in the brain, cardio-vascular disease and degenerative joint disease in the neck, can also contribute to the problem.

Ask seventy-five year old Andrew Doback what time it is and you may get a variety of answers. That's because Mr. Doback is a clock collector and repairer with a wide selection of timepieces ticking away inside his Naugatuck, Connecticut home. His collection consists of five hundred pieces but his personal favorite is an 87-inch tall solid mahogany grandfather clock with a triple chime. But when Doback really wants the time of day, he admits to depending on the electric clock.

Coastal commission is ready for reform

THE IRONY hung in the air, thick as a Pacific Grove fog, at last week's Coastal Commission meeting, illustrating perfectly why the powerful commission needs reform — for the benefit of the environment and property owners alike.

On the one hand, coastal commission executive director Peter Douglas dismissed as an aberration Judge Charles Kobayashi's recent ruling that the commission is unconstitutional. According to Douglas, the decision is nothing more than the result of a right-wing lawyer's lucky discovery of a single judge who agrees with his kooky interpretation of the separation of powers clause of the California Constitution. Under this view of things, the commission works just fine — power is shared, checks and balances are in place and nobody has any proper reason to feel aggrieved — and it's a forgone conclusion that an appeals court will overturn the Kobayashi ruling, letting the commission continue with business as usual.

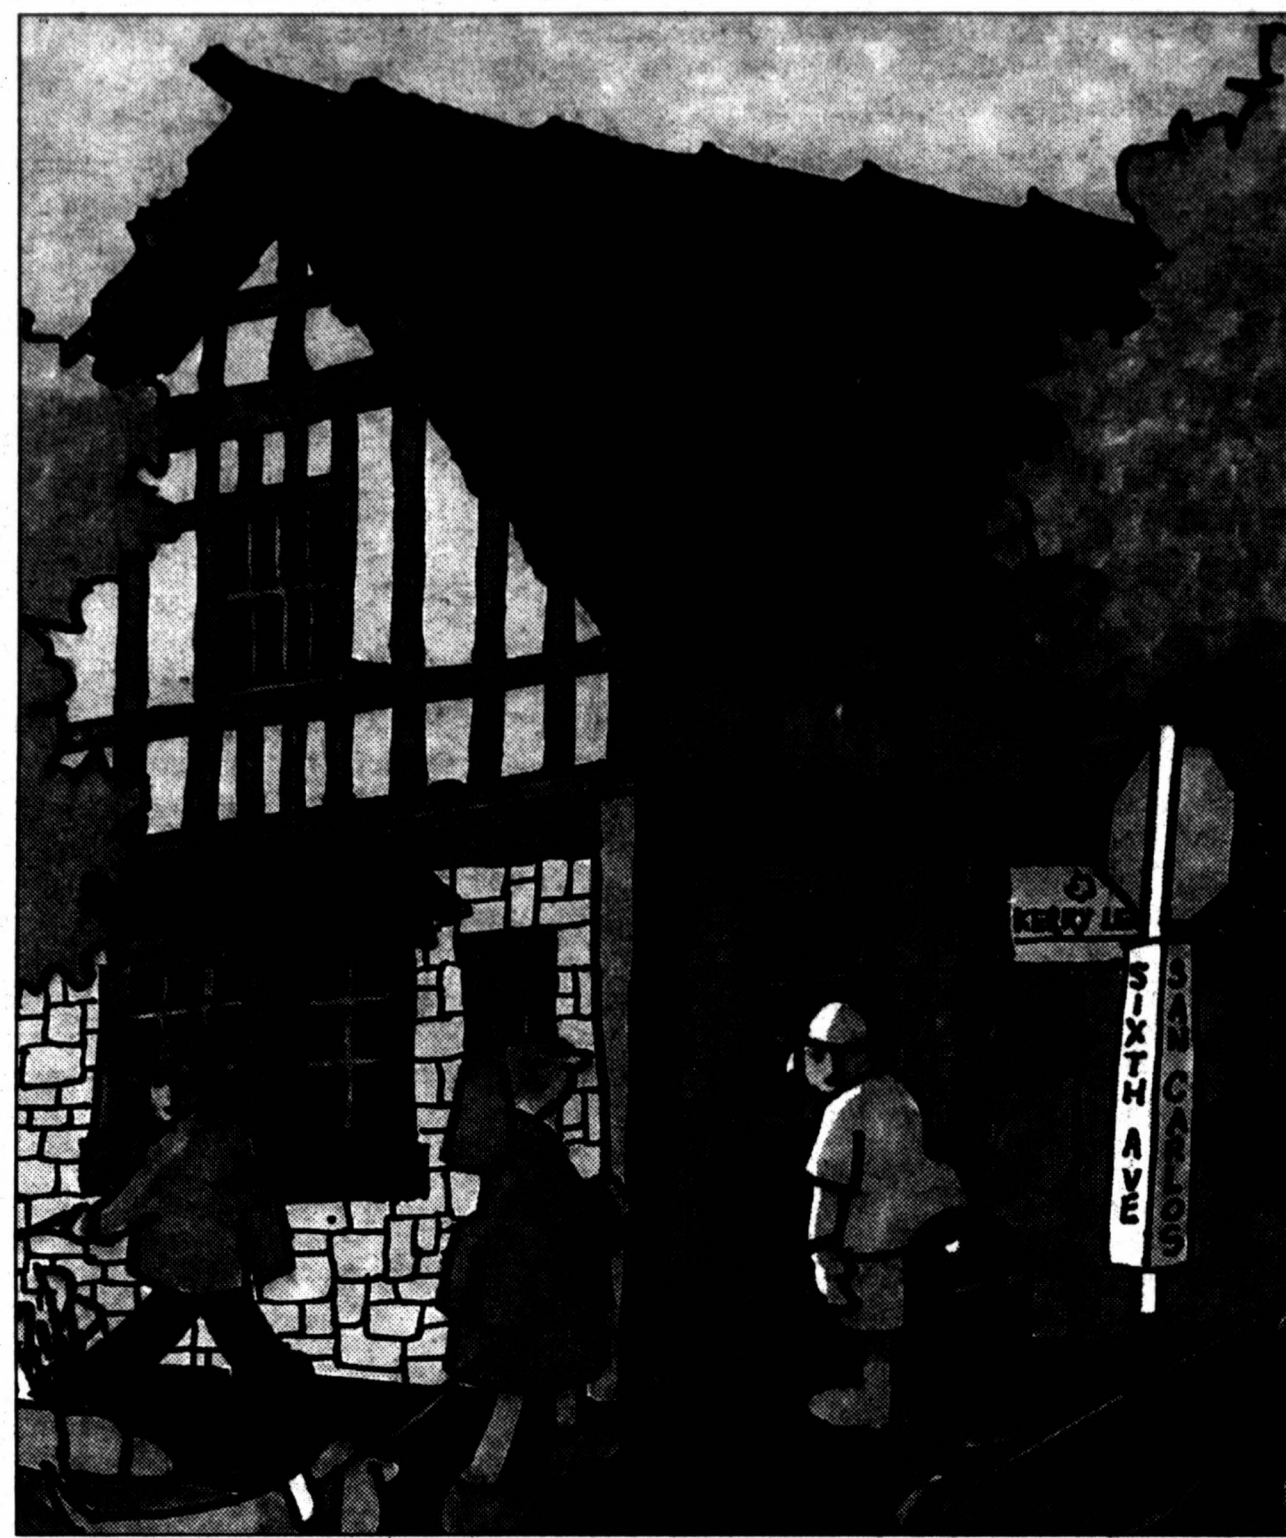

But Douglas followed his discussion of the Kobayashi decision by expounding on the need for the commission to be handed a great deal more power through Assembly Bill 640, which would make it possible for the commission to renege on agreements with local governments over coastal protection policies. Under this bill, which the commission strongly supports, if a city council or board of supervisors won't amend local development laws the way the coastal commission desires, the commission will have the power to ignore those policies altogether, making unilateral amendments at will to local zoning laws up and down the coast. Douglas told the commission he hopes cities and counties won't oppose the proposed bill "on ideology" — seemingly unaware that no local elected official in his right mind could agree to, in effect, give away all coastal land-use responsibilities.

Soon after Douglas spoke about the need for more oversight of local policies, one of his associates decried the inability of the commission to spend sufficient time reviewing those very policies — they just don't have enough resources to do that and everything else on their plate, she said. There was discussion of obtaining a federal grant so the coastal commission could hire more staff! Then, despite her professed desire to give more attention to overall coastal planning, she and the entire commission took the time to look over a 15-page staff report and visit the site of a planned 1,200-square-foot home on a hillside in Carmel. They then trooped in two buses through Carmel, looking over an assortment of single-family home projects — none of which could possibly qualify as development issues of statewide importance.

These events illustrate that the commission has gotten into a bureaucratic routine that makes it impossible for them to see the forest for the kelp.

Judge Kobayashi's ruling may eventually require that coastal commissioners be appointed through a revised process. That is a minor matter compared to getting the commission to give up its obsession with tiny development projects that should be left to officials at the local level. Everyone will benefit if the commission uses the Kobayashi ruling as an opportunity to reorganize itself and restore its focus on the major coastal development issues that confront this state, instead of worrying about window styles, driveway materials and chimney heights.

Horse rescue facility opposed

Dear Editor:

This is in response to the article written about the SPCA Horse Rescue Center on May 4th, as all the facts were not stated.

I am the neighbor identified in your article, and I do oppose the horse rescue facility at the proposed site, but I do not oppose the rescue center itself.

The lands proposed to be used for the project were dedicated to the SPCA in 1972 as a Wildlife Sanctuary in perpetuity (forever). The wonderful donor, Lady Kinnoull, had the foresight to say that in 30 years when all the land has been used for housing developments and asphalt roads, there would be this little bit of heaven for wild animals. She was asked why it was to be fenced and replied, "to keep people out."

The proposed land is a wetland six months of the year and not suitable for horses, who should not be standing in mud.

The entrance on Highway 68 (which is an "F" rated highway) is on a stretch of road between two stoplights where people speed. There is no left turn lane. It is not only dangerous to commuters but to the trucks & horse trailers that would be going in and out, not to mention the subdivisions Pasadera and Monterra which are under construction and will contribute significant additional traffic to an already over-crowded highway.

The Munras gates, which the SPCA proposes to demolish, are steeped in Spanish history and should be historically listed. Did you know that Casa Munras Hotel was the family home built in 1924?

One woman in your paper stated that there is nowhere for abused or neglected horses to go but the slaughter house. Not true... the SPCA has a barn and acreage at its present site (since 1968) which has housed abused horses and other large animals in the past. There are many good sanctuaries available for horses throughout California, as well as alternative sites for this project (e.g. Fort Ord) that would be better suited for the horses and safer for the public and volunteers to visit.

On July 1, 1994, Smith-Curtis filed a personal injury suit against Ok Soon and Wilber Hinson after the couple reportedly rear-ended Smith-Curtis while she was driving on Holman Highway on Aug. 28, 1993.

According to the Hinsons, their car tapped Smith-Curtis' when she failed to start moving at a green stoplight. The collision, they reported, caused $909.88 in damages to her vehicle, and she was reimbursed by their insurance company.

The accident reportedly caused headaches, pain and stiffness in her neck and left arm, and aggravation of the injuries she sustained when she fell in the Crowsons' driveway, according to court documents.

Smith-Curtis argued that she had returned to her full-time real estate duties on Aug. 1, 1993, after recovering from those prior injuries. She sued the Hinsons for wage loss, hospital and medical expenses, property damage, loss of use of property, general damages, loss of earning capacity, motor vehicle and general negligence.

In documents filed in court, Sacramento attorney John Welch had offered to settle the case for $35,000, and Monterey attorney Dennis Ward submitted a counteroffer of $11,501.

The case was scheduled to go to trial, but was dismissed at the request of Welch April 23, 1996, after it was reported as settled.

CMS kids kickin' butts

CARMEL MIDDLE School students will host a cigarette clean-up in town May 18, and whoever picks up the most butts, wins. But the butts won't end up straight in the trash — instead, they'll be boxed and shipped to magazines that advertise tobacco products while having large youth readerships. Register at Devendorf Park at 3:30, and party afterwards at 5:30 at the Carmel Youth Center.

CANYON HETTES, 1-1/2 years of age, had just spent two and a half hours chasing and returning her tennis ball to Mom Stacey on Carmel Beach when we encountered the ecstatic Belgian Malinois Thursday afternoon.

And yet, if the truth be known, she was eager to resume the chase and the fetch. Mom gave Canyon a good job rating, saying she is dedicated and perse-

Pretty. Smart.

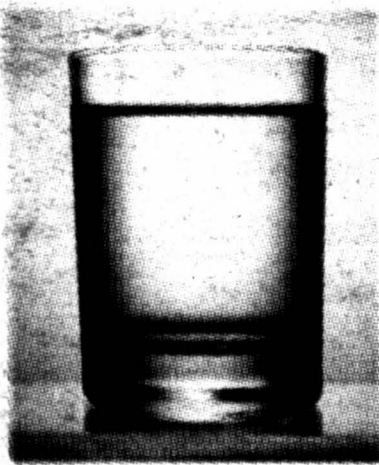

Drought tolerant native plants can make your yard and your wallet more lush.

You can cut your outdoor water use by up to 80 percent with xeriscape – the art and science of landscaping with plants that need little or no water.

Dozens of shrubs, flowers and trees thrive on just a little water every few days. Silverberry, Lilac, Purple Coneflower, Blue Flax, Purple Aster and dozens of other plants thrive on minimal water.

May is Water Awareness Month. It's a great time to drop by a local nursery to find beautiful plants that can enhance your garden and reduce your water bill.

Smart landscaping saves water so we have plenty for all our household needs.

To plan your xeriscape, consult these local resources:

vering and has never let a tennis ball get away.

The fawn and black Belgie, who appeared on Mom's doorstep at the age of six weeks, instantly made the Hettes home her home, and seemed not at all put out that there was already a furry Hettes in residence. Cirrus the cat, 9, has long, wispy white fur – hence the cloud reference – and tolerates young Canyon as only an older sibling can – with aloof indifference. And since Cirrus has never been one to sleep on Mom's bed, Canyon gets the choice spot.

Aside from digging holes in uncalled for places, Canyon's only other idiosyncrasy is eating spaghetti with meat sauce.

HISTORIC NOTLEY'S LANDING BOUGHT BY BIG SUR LAND TRUST

By PAUL MILLER

THE BUILDINGS are gone, the ships no longer call and the struggles of Big Sur's earliest pioneers are just a faded memory.

But the remnants of one of the Monterey coast's earliest ports will be preserved for the enlightenment of future generations with the Big Sur Land Trust's purchase this week of a six-acre property called Notley's from there to San Francisco and other California ports.

The wild property called Notley's Landing (top) was once a beehive of activity as ships called regularly to take wood and limestone to San Francisco and beyond. The two boys in the photo from the 1920s are probably Walter and Roy Trotter, sons of Big Sur pioneer Sam Trotter.

With the opening of Highway 1 in 1930, trucks became a much more economical — and safer — means of transportation. Notley's Landing was slowly abandoned. A fire eventually destroyed its substantial buildings. The hoist's foundation is the only thing that remains.

"The land has slowly returned to nature, and Notley's Landing contains a rich wildlife habitat today," Brown said.

The property could have been developed with a trophy home, land trust officials say, but its owner, Carmel Highlands resident Rose Ullman, preferred to see the property preserved.

"Our discussion with her went on for nearly 20 years," Brown said. The purchase price was not disclosed but was "very favorable," he added.

According to the land trust, the Notley's Landing purchase was made possible by grants from the California Coastal Conservancy, the Catherine and Robert O. McMahan Foundation, the Barnet J. Segal Charitable Trust and the Robert V. Brown and Patricia M. Brown Monterey Fund.

The property will be managed by the Big Sur Land Trust, which is considering what sort of public access is appropriate for the site.

Landing, just south of Rocky Point Restaurant in Big Sur.

"This land is not only a beautiful part of the Big Sur coast but is also an important symbol of the area's history," said Corey Brown, executive director of the land trust.

A hundred years ago, Brown said, Notley's Landing was a bustling port where two-masted sailing ships anchored just off shore — in constant peril of being smashed to bits on the rocks while redwood logs and the bark from tan oaks were painstakingly lowered from a winch house at the edge of the coastal bluff.

It seems impossible today, but Notley's Landing provided a bit more shelter than the surrounding coast. For decades, ships took regular loads of Big Sur's valuable wood and other natural resources

Carmel Plaza design guidelines get commission's OK

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE CARMEL Planning Commission voluntarily handed over some of its power May 16, when it recommended the city council accept Carmel Plaza's new guidelines for store exteriors.

The guidelines, which the Carmel Plaza's architect and city officials said were more strict than commercial design guidelines in the rest of the city, allow tenants to make exterior changes based on review by the plaza's consultants rather than picking their way through the usual planning department review process, according to senior planner Ben Berto.

A city planner would perform an "administrative" check of the plans, and would reserve the right to bring any questionable changes to the planning commission for review, Berto explained.

Architect Bill Brigham, hired by Carmel Plaza owner The Macerich Co. to write the guidelines, said he took five characteristics of the village into account when he drafted the rules: its natural setting, mix of architectural styles, use of natural materials, small scale and "a lot of specific requirements that address the informality of this place," he said.

The rules govern everything from exterior colors and window sizes to door handles and signs, and are furnished in book form to all new tenants.

While the exterior storefronts are held to a standard more befitting Carmel's traditional look, the interior courtyard storefronts are allowed a little more pizzazz in the guidelines — an aspect that concerned commissioner Pope Coleman.

Brigham explained his idea.

"We wanted to have the opportunity to have a little more life within the interior courtyard — the main differences are we allow slightly brighter colors, some use of polished metal for door handles, and polished stone as accents," the architect said, adding that only four storefronts in the courtyard area currently conform to the new guidelines.

An assurance from Brigham that high-gloss paint on large surfaces would be forbidden assuaged Coleman.

"I like it so much, I hope we can steal a bit from it to flesh out our own guidelines," commissioner Robin Wilson said, adding that he liked the specifics, including limiting color saturation to 20 percent. "There are other matters in here which pretty much echo our commercial design guidelines — they are more strict, if anything — and this is way of saving everyone some time and money."

Acting planning manager Chip Rerig reassured the commission that it would not be giving up control over design in the Plaza.

"We retain the ability to kick anything we don't like up to the planning commission or design review board," he said. "Also, we view guidelines as living documents that we can bring back."

Just 12 miles south of Carmel is this amazing property which has just been offered for sale. 1.5+ landscaped acres are surrounded on two sides by the rugged coast with views that go on forever.

Made for entertaining or quiet reflection, there are over 12,000 sq. ft. under roof. The living room is a gracious 45' x 30' looking out on the Pacific as well as overlooking the 2500 sq. ft. solarium which features a whale shaped heated swimming pool. The adjoining rec room has a massive rock wall fireplace, a circular wet bar and room for billiards, ping pong or putting.

The kitchen works equally well for simple family meals or entertaining on a grand scale. Caterers love it. The naturally cooled wine cellar is a special bonus - as is the four-room caretakers apartment, the charming guest house and the superb acoustics. 4 bedrooms, 4 fireplaces, 7 1/2 baths, 2 saunas, hot tub, barbeque area, and the list goes on and on.

The Perfect Carmel Charmer!

On this home's report card there are only A-pluses! An A+ for location, an A+ for condition, and an A+ to the sellers for restoring it with great sensitivity to preserving its natural Carmel charm. On a double corner lot, south of Ocean Avenue and only two blocks from the beach, this two bedroom plus den/office (could be third bedroom), three bath home is flooded with light from the many skylights, windows and French doors throughout. Fir floors and a massive stone fireplace with mantle in the living room, formal dining room, light and bright new kitchen and bathrooms... everything about this home is cheery and cozy. The front brick patio, surrounded by lovely landscaping, captures the sunshine most of the day. The back yard has a big lawn and some beautiful oaks and a detached one car garage. An A+ all the way around! $2,595,000.

A HOUSE BUILT in 1931 for artist Paul Dougherty is for sale for $3.5 million in Carmel-by-the-Sea, Calif. The four-bedroom, stucco-and-wood house has panoramic views of the Pacific from every room, and most rooms also have access to decks or patios. The emphasis on views is understandable given that Dougherty, who died in 1947 at age 70, was famous for his seascapes. His paintings, which include "California Cliffs" and "Toward the Sunlight," hang in many museums, including the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York. The house was completely restored two years ago. On the main level, there are original wide-plank pine floors in the great room, which has 28-foot ceilings and a huge stone fireplace that faces floor-to-ceiling windows. The owner, a banker, also replaced the roof and put in new electric, plumbing and mechanical systems.

Carmel area: Carmel High School student reported his Canon 35mm camera was taken from the photo room last month.

Carmel area: Welfare check conducted on an elderly female Pescadero Road resident.

Subject was in good health.

Carmel Valley: Investigation of possible child abuse of an 8-year-old male at a Los Laureles Grade residence.

Carmel area: Man reported seeing a subject walking on the Odello Ranch property with a flashlight. Upon arrival, unable to locate.

Big Sur: Marina resident parked his car at GarraPata Beach and when he returned to his vehicle, the window was smashed and his computer was stolen.

Carmel area: Flanders resident reported having an argument with his 18-year-old son.

Carmel Valley: Pacific Meadows resident called 911. Deputies responded and found her a bit confused. Contacted her daughter, who responded and took her back home.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 9

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Visitor accidentally locked out of inn room. Entry gained.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Sculptor reported that a gallery that had $7,000 to $8,000 worth of his sculptures on consignment had moved and the new location was not known. His calls had gone unanswered. Contacted the gallery owner. She said she would contact that man right away.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Junipero resident reported having an argument with her 76-year-old mother over trimming ivy from the fence in her front yard. Daughter agreed to allow trimming of the ivy during the first week of June.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Juvenile contacted and warned about riding motorized skateboard at San Carlos and Eighth without a helmet.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of an intoxicated subject. Unable to locate.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of excessive barking from dogs at a Santa Fe residence. Neighbor provided chronological log of dates and times dogs have been barking. Citation issued.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Citizen report receiving threatening calls on his cell phone. Contacted the suspect, who denied making threats but said he would not call the subject anymore.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Vehicle found displaying improper plates/tabs and found to be unregistered.

Carmel Valley: Bicyclist asserted he had been passed in the area of Carmel Valley Road and Stonepine by a driver in a green pickup truck without regard to his safety. His assertions could not be proven.

Carmel area: Manager of the Palo Coro Ranch reported seeing two male subjects on the property without permission. Upon arriving the area was checked, however deputies were unable to locate the subjects.

Pebble Beach: Vacant 17 Mile Drive house listed for sale was burglarized by persons unknown.

This newly-constructed 2,150 sq. ft. residence reflects a masterful blend of Carmel charm with English Country sensibility. Hand-hewn wood beam ceilings soar over the sun-streaked three bedroom, two bath interior with its three fireplaces, numerous window seats, glorious hardwood floors, a formal dining room, and top-of-the-line gourmet kitchen. Simply exquisite!
